Talking Together to Improve Health

Literature Review Executive Summary
Locally Driven Collaborative Project funded and supported by Public Health Ontario

The project team conducted a review of both grey and academic literature that explore strategies, approaches, and principles of engagement and collaboration between Indigenous Peoples and public sector agencies in North America and Australia.

Project Goal

This research project is to answer the following research question: “What mutually beneficial, respectful, and effective principles and practices of engagement between First Nations communities and public health units in Northeastern Ontario can be identified as an important step in working toward improved opportunities for health for all”.

Principles

Respect:
This principle focuses on the need for non-Indigenous Peoples to understand, acknowledge, and appreciate both the history and current context of Indigenous Peoples. The literature outlined a number of cultural competency practices that can be seen as a pre-cursor to any engagement activities.

Trust:
Trust was identified as necessary for establishing and maintaining a mutually beneficial partnership. As many historical and ongoing events have led to considerable distrust by many Indigenous Peoples, for any successful engagement to occur, trust must be a central consideration.

Self-determination:
Partnerships with Indigenous Peoples have been identified to be more successful if the principle of self-determination is considered and understood.

Commitment:
Commitment is important for sustaining long-term and effective partnerships. Practices that support co-learning and power sharing can foster mutual responsibility. Flexibility with regards to funding structures and timelines are also required to support a fulsome engagement process.

Literature Review Authors
Annie Berthiaume
Renée Chevrier-Lamoureux
Dr. Sheila Cote-Meek
Ryan Ferguson
Ghislaine Goudreau
Renée St Onge
Mariette Sutherland
Tracey Zurich (librarian support)

Indigenous Circle
Dr. Sheila Cote-Meek, Laurentian University
Rachel Cull, Misiway Milopemahtesewin Community Health Centre
Gloria Daybutch, Maamwesying North Shore Community Health Service
Dr. Emily Faries, Dr. Kevin FitzMaurice, Dr. Michael Hankard, University of Sudbury
Kim Lalonde, Nipissing First Nation
Caroline Lidstone-Jones, Weeneebayko Area Health Authority
Dr. Marion Maar, Northern Ontario School of Medicine.
Pam Nolan, Garden River First Nation Wellness Centre
Maurice Switzer, Nimkii Communications
Dr. Pamela Williamson, Noojmowin Teg Health Centre
Wise Practices

Respect:
Practices that honour the diversity of the unique Indigenous cultures are recommended. Formal acknowledgment practices, such as workplace signs that identify the traditional owners of the land, further foster this principle.

Trust:
Early engagement, working with respected Indigenous members, inclusivity of Indigenous members and genders, and appropriate and ongoing communication are all likely to build trust.

Self-determination:
This can be encouraged by ensuring collaborations are driven by Indigenous communities, providing opportunities to build Indigenous workforce capacity, building on the strengths of the Indigenous communities, and having strong Indigenous representation in the decision-making process.

Commitment:
Progressive leadership is required to support flexible funding structures and timelines. Additional supporting practices include purposeful Indigenous hiring, ongoing reflection, visible community presence, and ensuring that Indigenous communities validate the findings and that their perspectives are included.

Conclusion
These four principles and their associated practices present a synthesis of findings that have been utilized, suggested, or recommended to engage with Indigenous communities. This is an important foundational first step that provides supportive context and informs the next phases of this project, which include a survey to Ontario public health units, key informant interviews, and gathering information within First Nations communities.

The "Relationship building with First Nations and public health: Exploring principles and practices for engagement to improve community health" Project team would like to thank Public health Ontario (PHO) for its support of this project. The team gratefully acknowledges funding received from PHO through the Locally Driven Collaborative Projects program.

The views expressed in this publication are the views of the project team, and do not necessarily reflect those of Public Health Ontario.

Research Team
Sherri Cleaves, Dr. Marlene Spruyt, Laurie Zeppa, Algoma Public Health
Dr. Lianne Catton, Chantal Riopel, Lynn Leggett, Porcupine Health Unit
Dr. Christine Kennedy, Alanna Leffley, Grey Bruce Public Health
Dr. Sheila Cote-Meek, Dr. Carol Kauppi, Laurentian University
Chris Bowes, Amy Campbell, Jessica Love, North Bay Parry Sound District Health Unit
Sandra Laclé, Chanelle Larocque, Ghislaine Goudreau, Dr. Suzanne Lemieux, Renée St Onge, Dr. Penny Sutcliffe, Mariette Sutherland, Dr. Ariella Zbar, Sudbury & District Health Unit
Tracey Zurich (librarian support), Thunder Bay District Health Unit

September 2017